This Time Tomorrow 2024

The 2024 Pinot Grigio This Time Tomorrow is done in a Ramato style. One lot was aged for eight months on the skins in amphora, while the other was pressed off after 15 days then aged for eight months in neutral puncheon. It's a super-complex wine with layers of new leather, golden raisin, tarragon, grapefruit and petrol, finishing up with a nip of amaro herbs and a whisper of white smoke. Tingly acids and bitter phenolics grip the finish. This manages to avoid the trap of Ramato wines that can be volatile or unpleasant. The 2024 is a delicious and thought-provoking wine from Ryan Deovlet, and unlike pretty much anything else in Santa Barbara County.

This Time Tomorrow 2023

The 2023 Pinot Grigio This Time Tomorrow is a lovely stylistic outlier in the Deovlet range, produced as an homage to Elisabetta Foradori. It spent eight months on its skins before being combined with a pressed fraction and matured in a mix of sandstone amphorae and large-format barrels. It leads with a complex nose of dried leaves, pink peppercorn, roasted citrus, bitter orange and pine resin, followed by a vibrant, succulent palate and a long, nuanced finish that balances earth-tinged undertones with refreshing citrus top notes.
